AUSBIOTECH 2010 NATIONAL CONFERENCE SPEAKERS' PROFILE

Dr James Dromey
Business Development Manager
Walter and Eliza Hall Institute

Dr James Dromey is Business Development Manager at the Walter and Eliza Hall Institute in Melbourne. James' responsibilities include identifying, evaluating and commercialising research opportunities from the institute, as well as the management of a business development intern program that exposes early career scientists to technology transfer and helps develop skills in identifying innovations, inventions and technology licensing opportunities.

Prior to joining the business development team in 2008, James was a JDRF International Research Fellow working on strategies for induction of immune tolerance and also worked as a consultant to Nexpep Pty Ltd, an early stage company developing therapeutics and diagnostics for coeliac disease. James holds a PhD in immunology from King's College, University of London.
